License for utils2_ak henceforth known as the "package":

1. The "package" was developed by Art S. Kagel independent of any superseding license, patent, or copyright and he is its sole licensor. Some portions of the source code derive from common practice or the non-copyright works of others or were explicitly contributed to the "package" by other licensees for the common good (attribution is provided where known). The implied license provided with the "package" is not GPL, LGPL, copyleft, BSD, nor any similar license or license derived from these. This is a formal statement of this license which is provided without fee. It's provisions are simple:

2. The "package" is provided free of charge without warranty of any kind including implied warranties of suitability for a particular purpose.

3. Any person or legal entity who downloads the "package" from any website or software repository authorized by the author automatically has conferred upon him/her/it the full weight of this license so long as its provisions and the covenant implied therein by certain terms are adhered to.

4. The licensee is free to use the software source code and executable objects resulting from that source for any purpose public, commercial, or private except for redistribution for profit.

5. The author, Art S. Kagel, retains copyright and ownership rights as well as the right to distribute the "package" under other license terms without affecting the rights granted to users licensed under these terms at any time.

6. You may use all or substantial parts of the source code in your own software so long as the resulting software is not sold for profit unless a prior independent redistribution license is obtained from the licensor. This does not restrict the licensee from using all or substantial parts of the source code embedded in software developed for its own use, including software providing a service to third parties at a cost. Such use is deemed to be covered and rendered acceptable by the phrase "for any purpose public, commercial, or private except the redistribution for profit" above. Such use does not confer on the licensor any rights to the derived work. Such use does not confer on the licensee any obligation to provide source code to the licensor or to any third parties nor to include or display any attribution to the licensor beyond including any copyright notices embedded in the derivative source code.

7. The software is provided in source form, however, there is no requirement to distribute modifications or derived works to other licensees. The author/licensor appreciates the contribution of bug fixes and suggested features and source modifications and improvements back to him so that he may help the community of users who, along with the contributing licensee, benefit from this sharing. However, this is not a requirement under this license. Further, by providing such source code alterations of the "package" to the licensor the licensee explicitly relinquishes any rights to the source alterations provided.

8. There is no requirement to provide attribution of the licensor except that you may not remove the copyright notices embedded in the source code and executable objects therefrom derived.

9. Support for this software is provided for as long as the author is able, and for as long as his successors are willing, under the following specific conditions:

   9.1 Support, including usage help, bug fixes, and requested new features that are generally useful to the greater community of licensees, is provided without charge except that the author retains the right to request remuneration for time and effort at a value determined by mutual agreement with the licensee requesting support, but commits to doing so only if:

      9.1.1 The licensee requesting support has a specific response time requirement for a bug fix or feature request,

      9.1.2 The requested new feature will only or primarily be likely to be found useful by the requesting licensee,

      9.1.3 The requesting licensee desires that the new feature is expressly available solely to the requestor.

   9.2 Support is available by contacting the author via email at: art.kagel@gmail.com